CHRISTINE CARRIER ARTS ANNOUNCES THE SUMMER 2016 KES PROJECT

July 8th, 2016 New York, NY - Christine Carrier Arts is thrilled to continue the KES Project, a collaboration between clothing designer Lia Kes and fine artist Diego Anaya.

Fashion meets art at KES where two artists' souls transcend to create a magical moment. "Water Veil" is paint on canvas, 36" diameter and an original painting at Kes, 463 Amsterdam Avenue at 82nd Street. Currently Kes is running a Pop Up at 10A Jobs Lane Southampton, NY.

Kes' and Anaya's subtlety is key to their mutual elegance. Diego Anaya said "The beauty resides in the juxtaposition of elements, the treatment and the respect of the materials and most important the apparent simplicity on something that is complex".

Kes' designs reflect her upbringing, the realities of her current life and her vision for the future. A close look at any her garments reveal her meticulous attention to detail, construction and use of high quality materials. She effortlessly dresses the modern woman –from day to night, beyond trends, seasons and her ever-changing moods-and make her feel both empowered and naturally beautiful.

Kes is a native of Kibbutz Afikim, grew up in an idealistic Israeli pioneering community in northern Israel. Kibbutz life required day-to-day simple, practical clothing made at the communal sewing workshop known as the "matpera", where she learned to sew at the age of 12. Today Lia Kes "brings her minimalistic style, exquisite fabrics to the Upper West Side".

Diego Anaya is a Mexican born abstract painter living in New York City and a member of the Art Students League of New York. In less than five years in the art scene, Diego's success in sharing his work with art aficionados has quickly grown and resulted in rapid exposure throughout the U.S., Mexico and Asia. "My idea for the KES Project comes from the feeling and vibration of the space, the resemblance in the work, the echo of the visual textures, from the rhythm of living in New York City, the collaboration of artists and the bridge between fashion and art.

Christine Carrier Arts is an art world concierge management company with experience producing Art Fairs and Pop Up events in NYC and Miami, as well as consulting with galleries on market strategies to increase their visibility and brand recognition.
